$$$ DIFFERENCE

County forester Warren Taylor told county supervisors at their meeting Friday that the difference to landowners on costs of bulldozing or prescribed burning are quite different. Prescribed burning costs a landowner about $5 to $10 an acre, says Taylor, whereas bulldozing the same area could cost as much as $50 an acre. He said further, that at least one Appomattox county tree grower is reaping a harvest from 12-13 year old trees with more income practically guaranteed h year. The new Reforestation of Timber lands Program in Virginia will pay the landowner 50% of the costs incurred to prepare land and plant pines.

Taylor told supervisors that if people generally understood what a bargain and moneymaker the tree planting program is, they would line up to sign up and get in on tree-growing profits.

Winter wheat planting estimates are in and it looks like Virginia will have about 10 percent more acres for harvesting in '72.

The 1971 Virginia wheat crop had an average yield of 44 bushels per acre. This compares with the National average of 30.1 bushels per acre.

Had a note last week from Bob Judd, Managing Director, National Soybean Crop Improvement Council. He says that Appomattox farmers have a profitable crop option in 1972 and that's soybeans. This is based on some recent studies; current and projected market demand is calling for up to six million additional soybean acres in 1972. Production opportunities exist for at least 140 million more bushels of soybeans and prices promise to remain near-record high levels.

Speaking of soybeans, the Fifth Virginia Soybean Conference will be held at the Sheraton-Fredericksburg Motor Inn February 15, 1972. If you're planning to grow beans in '72 it will be worth your time to attend and hear the presentations.

Sign-Up Dates Changed For Farm Data

The recently-announced change in sign-up dates for 1972 set-aside farm programs allows time for consideration of the first available data on producers' plans for 1972, according to J.P. Avlis, Jr., Chairman of the county Agricultural Stabilization and conservation (ASC) Committee.

"My understanding is that the U. S. Department of Agriculture wants to provide time for both farmers and farm program officials to study the special farmers planting intentions report which is due January 27.

"So the sign-up period for the feed grain, wheat, and cotton set-aside programs will be Feb. 3 through March 10 instead of January 17 through February 25 as was first announced," he said.

"Many farmers are asking if these new sign-up dates mean program changes are in the offing. I don't think anybody yet knows. The planting intentions report will be carefully studied and evaluated. I suppose there is a possibility that unforeseen factors will show up," added Mr. Alvis.

The special planting intentions report on January 27 will be the first indication on a national scale of what farmers are planning for 1972 in the light of 1971 crop marketings.

In 1971, under a corn blight threat which didn't materialize, farmers planted and harvested a record corn crop. Wheat and feed grain production wasn't far behind and for farmers who had to sell at harvest, prices were too low. On the other hand, market competition for cotton, and soybeans has resulted in good prices for farmers.

The 1972 set-aside program provisions announced by USDA are designed to help American agriculture cut back on the acreage planted to all crops and to encourage farmers to produce those crops which best fit their farming operations. The aid is to increase farm income through the markets as well as protect farm income by making crop loans and set-aside acreage payments available to program participants.

Participation in the set-aside programs is voluntary, and Feb. 3 through March 10 is the period when farmers sign up at ASCS county offices for participation.

BOARD DISCUSSES INDIVIDUAL PUPIL NEEDS

reported that members of the State Dept. of Education plus three other educators from school divisions are scheduled to visit Appomattox County High School this week to write evaluation reports. New accreditation standards call for a self-study once every ten years, Smith said.

The director of instruction, Eugene Peyton, spoke on the subject "individual needs of the student." He said that the program of "continuing progress" in Appomattox schools, and particularly in Pamplin Elementary, Appomattox Primary School and a portion of Appomattox Intermediate answers the needs of all pupils, particularly those who need specific and individual help.

Supt. Smith said that school philosophy is changing in the matter of "special education" classes, and that whenever possible, each child who can be accommodated into a group, should be a part of the regular school situation and not given any "special" label.

Smith sees the need for a regional diagnostic center where hyperactive or disturbed children can be evaluated and help offered.

Psychological tests have been given to approximately 60 children in the system, said Smith.

Mr. Peyton said that Appomattox county with relatively small enrollment, cannot offer specialized help to severely handicapped children. It's unfortunate, he said, that parents must take these children away from their homes for schooling, but we have the interests of all children in mind and do accommodate all who can fit socially into a classroom situation, "Continuous progress provides for children sometimes relegated to special education classes," he said.

The school board approved the hiring of Mrs. Sarah Perkins, third grade instructor who replaces Mrs. Celestrial Turner. Mrs. Perkins is a graudate of Florida State University with a major in elementary education.

Two teachers' aides were appointed: Mrs. Glenna Hix who replaces Mrs. Lois Foxwell and Mrs. Shirley Lyon Nethercutt, who replaces Mrs. Mildred Hip-
